RE: Logan BROOK, DOB: 26/07/2013

Due to start at Galleywall Primary School from September 2017.

Current concerns: Phases of marked hyperactivity with defiant behaviour and poor attention

I saw Logan for a review on 27 July 2017 at the age of 4 years. The mother said that since the onset of the school holidays Logan's sleep pattern has worsened. He woke up at about 4 this morning and is now very tired. He goes through frequent phases of becoming hyperactive, runs around and becomes defiant. The mother showed me a video of Logan running around in the house, randomly picking and dropping things, and his younger brother Malachi copying him.

Logan remains generally healthy. He is not on any medicines. He eats well.

Logan's non-verbal abilities are at about 3 years of typical developmental age; his function at the nursery was also described to be somewhat behind other children. On my observations, Logan was able to pay attention to activities and toys, although he required frequent changes and a lot of adult direction.

Logan is a verbal child. He speaks in short sentences, clearly and fluently. He has poor conversational ability and does not listen well.

His general examination was unremarkable. There were no abnormal skin markings. His weight was 16.3kg (on the 50th centile) and head circumference 50.3cm (on the 9th centile).

I discussed with the mother that Logan seems to respond better to structure, both as reported and as observed. It may be a good idea to develop visual timetables. The mother uses good behavioural management techniques currently and a referral is being made to the Incredible Years Parenting by Ms Rachel Lee, Speech and Language Therapist.

I explained to the mother that at this stage the combination of his behaviour and hyperactivity is concerning. We discussed that it may be worthwhile waiting for the school to start looking at the impact of structure provided at the school on his behaviour and activity levels. If there are still continuing or marked difficulties, he should be referred to the Early Help services by the school for an assessment and management of possible ADHD.

We agreed to review him in November 2017 to check if the right support is in place and his progress.
